Commissioned Pricing and Request Sheet

Time frame varies based on where your request is in my queue and what medium you choose. Oil paintings generally take 4-6 weeks (please note that oil paintings take much longer to dry in order to ship without damage), acrylic paintings generally take 2-3 weeks, and charcoal portraits generally take 1-2 weeks to complete, all based on size and detail. Your business is greatly appreciated, so I will be honest with you about time estimates based on your specific needs. You have until halfway through the original approximated completion date to cancel your order, in which case I have rights to sell any artwork without personal identifying features (example: house numbers or detailed faces) as a non-commissioned portfolio piece.

An amount of 10% of the total price will be paid within a week of signing a formal contract with all prices and requests agreed upon to cover material costs. This amount is non-refundable if cancellation occurs after 1 week of signing because of loss of materials. The final payment will be made before shipment of the artwork.

Due to the personal nature of commissioned artwork and the opportunity for input from the client with update pictures provided, I have a no refund policy. If there are extenuating and/or exceptional circumstances they will be discussed on a case-by-case basis.

Update photographs will be given via email after initial sketching, at the halfway point of the estimated time frame, and upon completion. If extreme changes are necessary after completion for any reason other than dissatisfaction, an additional 5% will be added to the total price for the extra time.

To make the most of a small business my artwork is copyrighted, and most are reproduced in print form to sell additional work on a smaller, more affordable scale. Every commissioned piece is subject to being reproduced as a print or small work, unless the subject is a child. However, all clients have the right to request an exclusivity charge in order to prevent their artwork from being reproduced by the artist. This charge is an additional 5% of the total cost. While this charge is an agreement with the artist not to reproduce the artwork, the copyrights still lie with the artist, meaning the buyer cannot reproduce the piece for profit either.

Shipping is based on location and weight of the artwork. Please request an estimate if there are any concerns.

All options and charges will be clearly stated on the final contract to ensure your satisfaction with the request.

Please send the images you wish to be painted or drawn in jpeg or png form to the following email with this completed request sheet: em.fine.custom.art@gmail.com
